Предисловие

Настоящее учебное пособие предназначается для студентов экономических специальностей, изучающих иностранный язык в неязыковом вузе. Так как значительное расширение сфер международного сотрудничества требует от будущих специалистов не только знания иностранного языка, но и владения страноведческой информацией, то в учебное пособие включены тексты страноведческого характера.

В начале каждого урока представлены незнакомые слова для снятия лексических трудностей при чтении текста. К каждому тексту представлены упражнения для выполнения на текстовом и послетекстовом этапах. Упражнения на дифференциацию (true or false), подстановочные (complete the sentences) и трансформационные (prove that) позволяют проконтролировать степень понимания текста. Задание “comment on the following” способствует развитию навыков устной речи студентов.

В следующем разделе урока приводятся некоторые способы образования различных частей речи от общего корня, так как он посвящен расширению словарного запаса студентов, а также преследует цель ознакомления студентов с различными экономическими терминами (match the words with their definitions), изучение которых позволяет распознавать и понимать значительно большее количество лексических единиц.

Основное внимание в разделе “Grammar Focus” уделяется употреблению предлогов, так как данная тема является одной из наиболее сложных в английском языке.

Последний раздел урока “Writing” ориентирован на развитие письменной речи, рассматривающейся как процесс, в ходе которого студенты упражняются в развитии умения излагать собственные мысли, пользуясь содержанием текста как основой.

Для итогового контроля приобретенных знаний, умений и навыков в пособии приводятся лексико-грамматические тесты, представленные в двух вариантах к каждому уроку.

В данное пособие также включены тексты для дополнительного чтения.

Таким образом, настоящее учебное пособие позволяет не только дать страноведческие знания и знания по предмету, но также расширить и закрепить грамматические и лексические навыки, одновременно является стимулом к активной мыслительной деятельности.

SWEDEN

Capital: Stockholm

Area: 449,964 km²

Population: 8,559,000

Money: Basic unit – krona

Sweden is a prosperous industrial nation in northern Europe. The people of Sweden have developed highly prosperous industries based on their country's three most important natural resources – timber, which makes up about a fifth of the country's exports, a very high grade iron ore, and water power.

The Swedish standard of living is one of the highest in the world. The Swedes spend more money per person on holidays than any other people in Europe. About a fifth of all Swedish families have country homes where they can spend weekends and holidays enjoying hiking, skiing and other outdoor activities.

About 90 percent of Swedish industry is privately owned. Government ownership is restricted chiefly to mines, public transportation, energy and telecommunications. It also plays a major role in human services by providing free health care, education, welfare and retirement. The Swedish economy, in fact, was for years thought to be the model of European socialism.

Today Sweden is a welfare state. Parents receive generous maternity-care benefits, and education is free from grade school through college. Workers who are ill and can't work are eligible for up to 90 percent of the income they would have earned at their jobs.

In the last few years, however, Sweden has run into some problems because of the cost of financing all of its welfare programs. The government depends heavily on tax money to pay for the programs. Because of this, tax rates are high.

Many Swedes object to the heavy tax burden and have come up with ways to avoid paying taxes. Some have done this by resorting to barter. Others take up residence outside of Sweden.

To make up for the high tax rates, Swedish workers must earn high wages. This makes Swedish goods expensive and, therefore, harder to export. The less income there is from exports, the more the government has to absorb in unemployment and welfare benefits.

Even the unemployment rate is not as low as it seems. A person is counted as unemployed only when he appears at the welfare office to collect unemployment pay. When a factory needs more money to operate, it turns to the government to get another subsidy. So most workers, rather than being laid off, merely are reassigned to other jobs. As a result, the unemployment rate appears unrealistically low.

Although the Swedish people say they want a change, the government has found it hard to cut benefits. As a result, one of the major problems facing the Swedish economy in the years ahead is that of finding ways to either finance or control social welfare spending.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. Timber makes up about a fifth of the country's exports.
2. The Swedish standard of living is one of the lowest in the world.
3. Nowadays Sweden has problems because of the cost of financing all of its welfare programmes.
4. About 50 percent of Swedish industry is privately owned.
5. Tax rates are high in Sweden.
6. The unemployment rate is low in Sweden.
7. Some Swedes resort to barter in order to avoid paying taxes.
8. The Swedes spend more money per person on holidays than any other people in Europe.

9. Swedish goods are very cheap.
10. The Swedish economy was for years thought to be the model of European socialism.

II. Complete the sentences:

1. Sweden is a prosperous ...
2. The people of Sweden have developed industries based on ...
3. About a fifth of all Swedish families ...
4. Government ownership is restricted to ...
5. Workers who are ill and can't work are eligible for ...
6. The government depends on tax money to ...
7. Many Swedes object to heavy tax burden and ...
8. The less income there is from exports, the more ...
9. A person is counted as unemployed ...
10. One of the major problems, facing Sweden ...

III. Answer the questions:

1. What natural resources are industries in Sweden based on?
2. What facts show that the Swedish standard of living is one of the highest in the world?
3. Is education free in Sweden?
4. Why are tax rates high in Sweden?
5. What are the ways to avoid paying taxes?
6. Why is Sweden's unemployment rate deceptively low?
7. What is one of the major problems facing the Swedish economy in the future?

IV. Prove that:

- the Swedish standard of living is one of the highest in the world.

V. Explain why:

- the unemployment rate in Sweden is not as low as it seems;
- tax rates are high in Sweden.

VI. Comment on the following:

1. The Romans were the first people to make written records about the Swedes. About A.D. 100, the Roman historian Tacitus wrote about the Svear, a Scandinavian people. Sverige (Sweden) means land of the Svear.

2. The Swedish Broadcasting Corporation, run partly by the government, operates two television networks and several radio networks. The government does not permit advertising on radio or television.
3. Great economic and social changes occurred during the 1800's in Sweden. More land was brought into use for farming. But food was often in short supply because of a great increase in the population. There were not enough jobs and nearly 450 000 people left Sweden between 1867 and 1886. Most of them went to the United States.
4. Sweden is famous for smörgasbord, an assortment of cold and hot foods placed on a large table for self-service. Smörgasbord is served on holidays, in fine restaurants, and on board many Swedish cruise ships.

4. Swedish workers must earn high wages to ... for the high tax rates.
5. Swedish economy ... foreign trade.
6. If you want to avoid paying taxes, you can ... to barter.

II. Study the examples:

1. pay (someone) FOR something

I don't have enough money to pay for your service

but: pay a bill / a fine / a fare etc. (no preposition)

2. depend ON someone / something

Government depends on tax money

but: You can leave out on before question words

(when / where / how etc.):

“Are you going to buy this company?” “It depends how much it is.”

3. spend (money) ON something

How much money do Swedes spend on holidays?

Note that we usually say “spend (time) doing something”

I spend a lot of time reading about Swedish economy.

III. Make up some sentences of your own with the above expressions.

AUSTRIA

Capital: Vienna

Area: 83,849 km²

Population: 7,611,000

Money: Euro

Austria is a small country in central Europe famous for its beautiful mountain scenery. The towering Alps and their foothills stretch across the country. In many areas, broad, green valleys separate the mountains. Austria has many lovely, mirrorlike lakes.

Most Austrians live in cities and towns. About a fifth of the people live in Vienna, which lies on the Danube River in the northeastern part of the country.

Austria was once one of the most powerful countries in Europe. The royal Habsburg family began to gain control of Austria in the late 1200's. In time, the country became the centre of a huge empire that was ruled by the Habsburgs. This empire collapsed after World War I ended. Austria then became a republic and went through a long period of economic difficulty and political unrest.

Since the early 1950's, Austria has become increasingly industrialized, and its economy has grown steadily. Today, Austria is a prosperous country with little unemployment. Austria's economy is based mostly on private ownership. But the government owns companies in several industries as well as certain transportation and communication services.

Austria's macroeconomic policy of the 1970s and of the first half of the 1980s may be characterised as a mix of an expansive fiscal policy, tight money policy, and an incomes policy based on social partnership. The social partnership can be described as a system which attempts to avoid and overcome the class struggle by cooperation between labour business and agriculture. This combination of an expansive fiscal policy, a tight money policy, and an incomes policy is often described as "Austro-Keynesianism". Austro-Keynesianism helped to overcome the consequences of the first oil-shock (1973-1974), but the second oil shock (1979-1980) demonstrated its limitations.

Since the beginning of the 1980s the economic difficulties in Austria have increased. The core of the problem has been that the process of structural change in Austria has been too slow. Austria's economic policy concentrated too much on solving current problems; it failed to develop a programme of structural change.

Now Austria depends heavily on foreign trade, especially trade of manufactured goods with other European industrialized nations. Service industries provide about 60 per cent of the total value of Austria's annual economic production. Services also employ about 60 per cent of the country's workers. Austria has a variety of minerals. The country ranks as one of the world's leading producers of magnesite, which is used to make such products as heat-resistant bricks, plaster, and artificial stone. The production of fine handicrafts forms an important part of Austria's economy. Skilled craftworkers make a variety of objects, including glassware, jewellery and woodcarvings.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. Austria is a small country in eastern Europe.
2. Most Austrians live in cities and towns.
3. Service industries provide about 80 per cent of the total value of Austria's annual economic production.
4. Austria's economy is based on private ownership.
5. Once Austria was a centre of a huge empire that was ruled by the Habsburgs.
6. The combination of an expansive fiscal policy, a tight money policy and an incomes policy is often described as "Austro-Keynesianism".
7. Since the early 1950's, Austria has become increasingly industrialized.
8. Magnesite is used to make such products as heat-resistant bricks, plaster, and artificial stone.
9. Austro-Keynesianism helped to overcome the consequences of the first oil-shock.
10. Austrian craftworkers make a variety of objects, including glassware, jewellery and woodcarvings.

II. Complete the sentences:

1. Austria was once ...
2. About a fifth of the people live ...
3. Today, Austria is a ...
4. The government owns ...
5. Austria's macroeconomic policy of the 1970s ...
6. Since the beginning of the 1980's ...
7. Now Austria depends ...
8. Austria ranks as one of ...
9. The production of fine handicrafts forms ...
10. Austria is a small country in ...

III. Answer the questions:

1. What is Austria famous for?
2. Where do most Austrians live?
3. Who ruled Austria when it was a centre of a huge empire?
4. Is Austria a prosperous country now?
5. What is "Austro-Keynesianism"?
6. How many people do services in Austria economy?
7. What is an important part of Austria's economy?

IV. Prove that:

- service industries play an important role in Austria's economy;
- Austria was once one of the most powerful countries in Europe.

V. Explain why:

- since the beginning of the 1980's the economic difficulties in Austria have increased.

VI. Comment on the following:

1. As a neutral nation, Austria serves as an important channel for the exchange of ideas between the countries of Western Europe and Eastern Europe. Many refugees from Communist countries such as Czechoslovakia or Hungary escaped into Austria. Vienna is the home of a number of UN agencies.
2. Throughout Austria's history, many different groups of people settled in the country. Each group mixed with other peoples and so helped shape the ancestry of present-day Austrians. In ancient times, the peoples of Austria included Celts and Romans. Later, Asians, various Germanic groups settled in Austria. From the 1300's, Austria attracted Italians and various Slavic groups. As a result of this mixing of peoples, there is no typical Austrian.
3. Manufactures in Austria tend to stress high quality rather than mass production. Many factories are small or medium-sized. In small workshops throughout Austria, skilled craftsmen produce fine glassware, needlework, porcelain objects and other handicrafts.
4. Austria is one of Europe's most popular holiday sports. Millions of tourists visit the country every year. Skiers from many countries flock to the superb ski areas in the Austrian Alps. The booming tourist industry adds substantially to Austria's national income.

NORWAY

Capital: Oslo

Area: 386, 958 km²

Population: 4,319,000

Money: Basic unit – krone

Norway is a long, narrow country on the north-western edge of the European continent. Oslo, Norway's capital and largest city, is in the southern part of the country. Most of the Norwegian people live near or along the sea. Winds warmed by the sea give the coast much warmer winters than other regions so far north, and snow melts quickly there. Inland areas are very much colder, and snow covers the ground much of the year.

Since the time of the Vikings, the Norwegians have been a seafaring people. Norway's coast is famous for its many long, narrow inlets of the sea called fiords, which provide fine harbours. Norwegian fishing crews bring in large numbers of cod, haddock, herring and mackerel. Much of the catch is processed for export. Norway began developing its great shipping fleet during the 1600's. Today, Norway's fishing and shipping industries rank among the world's largest.

Norway has a well-developed economy. Since the late 1940's, the nation's income from the production of goods and services has increased sharply. The rapid economic growth has resulted largely from (1) government programmes to promote investment and industries, and (2) increased foreign demand for the goods and services of Norway.

Norway is mostly a high, mountainous plateau covered by bare rock, and it has a relatively small amount of farmland. But the rivers that rush down from the mountains provide much cheap electricity. Norway generates more hydroelectric power per person than any other country. Norwegian manufacturing is based on this cheap power. Important products of Norway include chemicals, metals, petroleum, processed foods and wood pulp and paper.

Mining became a major Norwegian economic activity during the 1970's, when the country began producing petroleum and natural gas from North Sea fields. Today, petroleum and natural gas account for a large part of the country's income.

Forestry has been an important industry in Norway for hundreds of years. Lumber became a major export during the 1500's. The chief commercial trees include birch, pine and spruce.

Norway depends heavily on foreign trade to help keep its standard of living high. The nation's trade is one of the largest in the world in relation to its population. Norway, with limited natural resources, imports a wide variety of foods, minerals and manufactured goods. Norway's merchant fleet, one of the largest in the world, is also an important source of income for the country. The fleet provides shipping services for countries in all parts of the world.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. Norway is a small country on the north-eastern edge of the European continent.
2. Since the time of the Vikings, the Norwegians have been a seafaring people.
3. Norway began developing its great shipping fleet during the 1800's.
4. Norway generates more hydroelectric power per person than any other country.
5. The rivers that rush down from the mountains provide much cheap electricity in Norway.
6. Today, petroleum and natural gas account for a small part of the country's income.
7. Forestry isn't an important industry in Norway.
8. Norway has limited natural resources.
9. The nation's trade is one of the largest in the world in relation to its population.
10. Norway's fleet provides shipping services only for Scandinavian countries.

NETHERLANDS

Capital: Amsterdam

Area: 41,863 km²

Population: 15,740,000

Money: Euro

The Netherlands is a small country on the North Sea in northwestern Europe. “God created the world, but the Dutch created Holland,” according to an old Dutch saying. More than two fifths of the country’s land was once covered by the sea, lakes or swamps. The Dutch “created” this land by pumping out the water. In these drained areas, called polders, are the richest farmlands and largest cities of the Netherlands. Amsterdam, the capital and largest city, is on a polder. Buildings in Amsterdam stand on wooden or concrete piles driven deep into the soggy ground. The Netherlands is famous for its many canals.

The Netherlands’ economy is technically advanced and highly industrialized. Skilled workers have made possible manufacturing industries such as electronics and chemicals. Modern farming techniques have made the Netherlands’ small amount of farmland highly productive. Because the country is small and has few natural resources, it depends heavily on foreign trade.

Service industries, taken together, account for about two-thirds of the Netherlands’ gross domestic product (GDP). Community, social, and personal services form the most important type of service industry. Trade, hotels, and repair shops form the second most important type of it.

Manufacturing is the single most important economic activity in the Netherlands in terms of the GDP. The government and organizations of employers and workers have cooperated in establishing wages and other job policies. As a result, strikes are uncommon.

Food processing is a major manufacturing industry. Dairy products – especially butter, cheese, and processed milk and eggs – are the chief foods. The Netherlands is one of the world’s major cheese manufacturers.

The chemical industry produces drugs, fertilizers, paints, plastics, and synthetic rubber. Amsterdam has long been a famous centre of diamond cutting and polishing.

Dairy farming is the most important form of agriculture in the Netherlands. Most of the dairy farmers also grow crops, which are used mainly to feed the livestock. An important speciality of Dutch agriculture is horticulture. Flowers and vegetables are grown in enormous greenhouses. They are exported to neighbouring countries, and fresh flowers are flown to most parts of the world. Flower bulbs, especially tulips, are also important.

The Netherlands has an extensive network of navigable rivers and canals. The main rivers and many of the canals are important waterways, and oceangoing ships use the larger ones. Motor barges on the inland waterways carry more than half the nation’s total freight.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. The Dutch “created” Holland by pumping out the water.
2. The Netherlands is famous for its many canals.
3. Dutch workers have made possible manufacturing industries such as electronics and chemicals.
4. Strikes are common in the Netherlands.
5. Many flowers and vegetables are imported.
6. Service industries account for about a half of the Netherlands’ GDP.
7. An important speciality of Dutch agriculture is horticulture.
8. The Netherlands is one of the world’s major meat manufactures.
9. The Netherlands is a small country on the Black Sea.
10. Motor barges on the inland waterways carry more than half nation’s total freight.

IV. Prove that:

- the Dutch “created” Holland;
- horticulture is an important speciality of Dutch agriculture.

V. Explain why:

- Netherlands' farmland is highly productive.

VI. Comment on the following:

1. The Dutch exchange gifts on St. Nicholas Eve, December 5, instead of at Christmas. The children believe that Saint Nicholas visits their homes with presents for good boys and girls. A man dressed like a bishop represents Saint Nicholas and rides through the streets. In Amsterdam, he arrives by steamship and is greeted by ringing bells and cheering crowds. During the 1600's, the Dutch took the custom of Saint Nicholas' visit with them to America. There, the English settlers changed his Dutch nickname, Sinterklaas, to Santa Claus.
2. The Netherlanders are known for their good fellowship, called gezelligheid. This cosy friendliness, as well as Dutch orderliness, helps make life pleasant in the thickly populated country. When families or friends gather, rich chocolates and pastries are often served.
3. The Netherlands has no general secondary school programme. Instead, it has several kinds of secondary schools. Each kind trains students for a special purpose, such as university work, advanced study in various institutes, or jobs in business or industry.
4. Most Netherlanders wear clothing similar to that worn in most other Western countries. People in farm areas and fishing villages sometimes wear the famous Dutch wooden shoes called klompen. These shoes are noisy, but they protect the feet from damp earth better than leather shoes do. The Dutch do not wear wooden shoes in their homes. They leave them outside and change to leather shoes.

FINLAND

Capital: Helsinki

Area: 338,145 km²

Population: 5,066,000

Money: Euro

Finland is a country in northern Europe famous for its scenic beauty. Thousands of lovely lakes dot Finland's landscape, and thick forests cover almost two-thirds of the land. The country has a long, deeply indented coast, marked by colourful red and grey granite rocks.

Finland's location between Russia on the east and Sweden on the west has played an important role in the country's history. In the 1000's, Sweden and Russia began to battle for possession of Finland. Sweden gradually gained control in the 1100's and 1200's, but conflict continued for hundreds of years. Today, Swedish remains equal with Finnish as an official language of Finland. Russia controlled the country from 1809 until 1917, when Finland declared its independence.

The Finns have a high standard of living and receive many welfare benefits from the government. Finland's economy is based mostly on private ownership. However, the national government has a monopoly on certain businesses, such as the railway and postal systems. In forestry and some other industries, government-owned businesses compete with private companies. Service industries account for 62 per cent of Finland's GDP, manufacturing accounts for 24 per cent and construction accounts for 8 per cent.

Finland's greatest natural resource is its widespread forests. But other resources are limited. Finland's soil is poor, and the crop-growing season short. The country has no deposits of oil, natural gas, or coal.

Woodworking, pulp and paper production, and other forest-based industries are Finland's chief manufacturing industries. Finland ranks as the world's top producer of plywood. The country is also a leading producer of paper. Other major forest products include wood paneling and prefabricated houses, which are erected in factory-made sections.

Finland's metalworking industry has expanded rapidly since the 1940's. The chief metal products include farm machinery and equipment, electric motors and generators, and machinery for use in the paper and timber industries. Finland also produces buses, ships, and other transportation equipment. The shipbuilding industry is especially known for its sturdy, powerful icebreakers and its ferries.

Finland imports large quantities of fruits, vegetables, industrial raw materials, manufactured goods not produced in Finland and petroleum. Paper, pulp, and wood products make up about 35 per cent of the country's exports. Other major exports include products of the metalworking industry, such as machinery and ships. Finland also exports millions of farmed furs each year. Finland's major trading partners include Great Britain, Sweden, and Germany.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. The most famous feature of Finnish life is a special kind of bath called a sauna. Most Finns take a sauna at least once a week for cleansing and relaxation.
2. About 6,000 Lapps live in northern Finland. The ancestors of these short, stocky people lived in Finland long before the first Finns arrived thousands of years ago. Finland also has about 6,000 Gypsies and small groups of Jews and Turks.
3. Finland has a rich folk culture, which is reflected in the country's crafts, music, and painting. The person most responsible for preserving Finland's oral folklore was Elias Lonnrot, a country doctor. He collected the centuries-old song-poems and chants of the Finnish peasants and published them in 1835. This huge collection, called the Kalevala, became Finland's national epic.

4. Election to the Eduskunta (parliament of Finland) is based on a system called proportional representation. This system gives a political party a share of seats in the parliament according to its share of the total votes cast in an election. The system encourages small parties to put up candidates and makes it hard for any one party to win a majority.

DENMARK

Capital: Copenhagen

Area: 43,077 km²

Population: 5,154,000

Money: Basic unit – crone

Denmark is a small kingdom in northern Europe that is almost surrounded by water. It consists of a peninsula, called Jutland, and 482 nearby islands. More than half of the Danes live on the islands near the peninsula. Copenhagen, the capital and largest city, is on the largest island. About a quarter of all Danes live in Copenhagen area, and almost half of the country's manufacturing industries are located there.

Denmark has one of the world's highest standards of living. The Danes have achieved prosperity even though their land is poor in natural resources. They sell their products to other countries to pay for the fuels and metals they must import for their industries.

Denmark is famous for its farm products, particularly butter, cheese, bacon and other processed foods. It is also known for its beautifully designed manufactured goods, including furniture, porcelain and silverware. Since the Viking era, the Danes have been a seafaring people, and Denmark is still one of the world's great shipping nations. Fishing has always played an important part in Denmark's economic life. The rich fishing grounds in the country's coastal waters and in the North Sea continue to ensure that fishing remains a major industry.

During the 1970's and early 1980's, Denmark faced an economic recession. In 1982, a Conservative-led coalition government replaced the government of the Social Democrats. This centre-right coalition worked to encourage economic recovery, but Denmark still faced problems of environmental pollution, unemployment and the high cost of welfare services. Eventually, the centre-right coalition was brought down in 1993, not by the economic situation, but by a political scandal. It was replaced by a centre-left coalition led by the Social Democrats once more.

Now Denmark has a strong economy. Denmark obtains some natural gas and petroleum from wells in the North Sea. Other mineral products include chalk and industrial clays. Much of the soil in Denmark lacks nutrients, so it requires heavy use of fertilizers to make it productive. The land is flat or gently rolling, so the rivers cannot be used to generate hydroelectric power. The seas that almost surround the country provide an inexpensive means of transportation by which Denmark can import its industrial needs and export its products.

FRANCE

Capital: Paris

Area: 543,965 km²

Population: 58,363,000

Money: Euro

France is the largest country of Western Europe in area. Paris, the capital of France and largest city in the country, ranks as one of the world's great cities. For hundreds of years, Paris has been a world capital of art and learning. Paris attracts artists and writers of all nationalities. Many great artists have produced their finest masterpieces there.

There is much more to France than just Paris however. The snow-capped Alps form the border between France and Italy attract many climbers and skiers. Sunny beaches and steep cliffs stretch along the French coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The French Riviera is a popular holiday region. The peaceful, wooded Loire Valley has many historic chateaux (castles). Colorful apple orchards, dairy farms, and vineyards are located throughout much of the countryside.

The French are famous for their enjoyment of life. Good food and good wine are an important part of everyday living for most French people. The wines of France are considered to be the best in the world.

France is not only a beautiful and historic country; it is also rich and powerful. France stands fifth among the countries of the world in its trade with other nations, as measured by exports.

France is prosperous nation and its people have a high standard of living. The prosperity has resulted largely from sweeping economic changes that have been made since the 1940's before World War II; the French economy was based mainly on small farms and business. After the war, the French government worked to modernize the economy. New methods of production and trade were developed through a series of national plans. These improvements have brought ever increasing production.

Most French businesses are privately owned. But the government has long owned all of part of some businesses. For example, it has had complete ownership of France's three largest banks and Renault – the largest French car manufacturer.

Natural resources play an important part in France's prosperity. Fertile soils are the country's most important natural resource. France has major deposits of iron ore and bauxite.

France ranks as one of the world's leading manufacturing nations. France is the fourth largest producer of cars in the world, after Japan, the USA, and Germany. France also makes railway equipment and has the world's fastest trains.

France is the major manufacturer of sophisticated military and commercial airplanes. Toulouse is the centre of aircraft production. France has a fast-growing commercial electronics industry that produces computers, radios, television sets, and telephone equipment. The chemical industry produces a variety of products, from industrial chemicals to medicines and cosmetics. French plants make high-quality glass and tyres.

The famous French perfume industry, based in Paris, uses flowers that are grown in southeastern France.

SWITZERLAND

Capital: Bern

Area: 41,293 km²

Population: 6,753,000

Money: Swiss franc

Switzerland is a small European country known for its beautiful, snow-capped mountains and freedom-loving people. Switzerland is a prosperous country with one of the world's highest standards of living. The nation's highly specialized industries are extremely profitable. Switzerland has more jobs than its own people can fill. Workers from other countries make up about a fifth of Switzerland's labour force.

Switzerland trades with nations throughout the world, but chiefly with Western European countries and the United States. The Swiss import more goods than they export. They make up the difference with income from tourism and from banking, insurance and transportation services to foreign people or firms.

Switzerland is one of the most industrialized countries in the world. Its manufacturing industries are based on the processing of imported raw materials into high-quality products for export. To keep the cost of materials and transportation as low as possible, these industries specialize in skilled, precise work on small, valuable items. In Switzerland's watchmaking industry, for example, the cost of materials is only about one-twentieth the cost of labour. More than 95 percent of the watches made in Switzerland are exported.

The Swiss make such engineering products as generators and other electrical equipment, industrial machinery, machine tools, precision instruments, and transportation equipment. Other major products are chemicals, paper, processed foods including cheese and chocolate, silk and other textiles.

Agriculture in Switzerland supplies only about three-fifths of the people's needs. The rest of the nation's food must be imported. Livestock raising is the most important agricultural activity because of the limited cropland resources and the climate. It provides about 75 percent of Switzerland's farm income, largely through dairy farming.

Banking also ranks as one of Switzerland's major industries. Swiss banks attract deposits from people in many countries. The banks are probably the safest in the world, partly because of the nation's neutrality. Depositors can choose to be identified by a number known only to themselves and a few bank officials. In this way, a private fortune can be kept secret. But the secrecy may be broken in the investigation of criminal cases.

Since the early 1800's, large numbers of tourists have come to Switzerland. Today, more than 11 million tourists visit it yearly. Switzerland has thousands of hotels and inns for tourists. Skiing is especially popular. Water sports on Lake Geneva and other lakes also attract tourists.

VI. Comment on the following:

1. The Swiss have a long tradition of freedom. About 700 years ago, people in what is now central Switzerland agreed to help each other stay free from foreign rule. Gradually, people in nearby areas joined them in what came to be known as the Swiss Confederation. In the early 1500's, Switzerland established a policy of not taking sides in many wars that raged in Europe. During World Wars I and II, Switzerland remained an island of peace. Switzerland provided safety for thousands who fled from the fighting, or from political persecution.
2. Switzerland has a militia (citizens' army) instead of regular armed forces. Men are required to begin a series of military-training periods at age 20. They keep their weapons and uniforms at home, and can be called up in an emergency. Men whose health or work makes them unable to serve, or who live out of the country, pay a special tax.
3. The president is elected to a one-year term by the legislature. A candidate is chosen from among the members of the Federal Council. The president can't be elected for a second term that immediately follows his year in office.
4. The Swiss Constitution provides for 3 official languages. The official languages are German, French and Italian. All national laws are published in each of these 3 languages. The four national languages are the three official ones plus Romansh, which is closely related to Latin.

GERMANY

Capital: Berlin

Area: 355,574 km²

Population: 83,243,000

Money: Euro

Germany is a large country in central Europe. From 1949 to 1990, it was divided into the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) and the Federal Republic of Germany (West Germany). West Germany was a parliamentary democracy with strong ties to Western Europe and the USA. East Germany was a Communist dictatorship closely associated with the Soviet Union.

After World War II, the West Germans and East Germans rebuilt their shattered industries and made them more productive than ever. West Germany became one of the leading industrial nations. East Germany ranked as one of the most economically advanced of the nations that adopted Communism. Yet dissatisfaction led millions of East Germans to flee to West Germany between 1946 and 1961, the year that East Germany built the Berlin Wall to cut off the major escape route. In 1989, reform movements swept through the Communist nations of Europe. In East Germany, political protests and massive emigration set in motion the chain of events that ended in the unification of East and West Germany. On October 3, 1990 East and West Germany were unified into a single nation, also called the federal Republic of Germany. Berlin is Germany's capital and the largest city.

Germans are famous for being hard-working and disciplined, but they are also known for their love of music, dancing, and good food. Germans also enjoy vacations in their world-famous scenic areas. The Bavarian Alps, for example, are a popular winter sports region. The beautiful Rhine River winds through valleys with grand castles overlooking the river.

In 1945, Germany's economy lay almost in total ruin. West Germany's postwar recovery was greatly helped by aid that the United States began to send in 1948 under the Marshall Plan. The West German economy recovered at an amazing rate in the 1950's. This recovery is described as West Germany's "economic miracle".

In East Germany, the Soviet Union set up a strong Communist state where the government controlled the economy, including production, distribution, and pricing of almost all goods.

During the elections in 1990, East Germans elected officials who favoured unification with West Germany. One of the first steps toward unification was the union of the economies.

Manufacturing is the foundation of Germany's economic strength. It was the basis of Germany's economic recovery from World War II. The Ruhr is the most important industrial region and one of the busiest in the world.

Much of Germany's steel is used to make automobiles and trucks, industrial and agricultural machinery, ships, and tools. The country is the world's third largest manufacturer of automobiles.

The most important group of service industries in Germany is community, government and personal services. Germany is one of the world's leading trading nations. Germany imports great amounts of food, fuel, manufactured goods, and industrial raw materials. Its major exports include automobiles, chemicals, iron and steel products, and machinery.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. West Germany was a constitutional democracy.
2. Many East Germans fled to West Germany between 1946 and 1961.
3. In 1988, reform movements swept through the Communist nations of Europe.
4. Germans are famous for being lazy and undisciplined.
5. There are many world-famous scenic areas in Germany.
6. In 1950, Germany's economy lay almost in total ruin.
7. The government in East Germany controlled the economy.
8. Manufacturing was the basis of Germany's economic recovery from World War II.
9. Germany is the fourth largest manufacturer of automobiles.
10. Much of Germany's steel is used to make automobiles, machinery, ships, and tools.

II. Complete the sentences:

1. From 1949 to 1990, Germany was divided into ...
2. After World War II, the West Germans and East Germans ...
3. Berlin is ...
4. Germans enjoy vacations in ...
5. West Germany's postwar recovery was helped by ...
6. In East Germany, the Soviet Union set up ...
7. During the elections in 1990, East Germans ...
8. Germans are known for ...
9. Germany imports ...
10. The most important group of Service industries in Germany is ...

III. Answer the questions:

1. When were East and West Germany unified?
2. What events in East Germany helped bring about the unification of East and West Germany?
3. What are popular places for vacations in Germany?

4. What is Germany's leading industrial region?
5. Why did the Communists build the Berlin Wall in 1961?
6. What was called West Germany's "economic miracle"?
7. What does Germany export?

IV. Prove that:

- East Germany was a Communist dictatorship;
- reform movements in 1989 greatly affected East and West Germany.

V. Explain why:

- many Germans spend vacations in their country.

VI. Comment on the following:

1. Two main forms of the German language have long been spoken in Germany – High German in the South and Centre and Low German in the north. In addition, there are many dialects associated with particular regions or cities. Today, schools, businesses, newspapers, and radio and television broadcasts use a standardized form of High German called Standard German.
2. Economic reunification had several results. Goods that had been scarce in East Germany became available. But the cost of many goods in the free market was higher than they had been when the government controlled prices. The government of the unified Germany continued selling businesses formerly owned by the East German government. Economic reunification also caused problems for eastern German businesses. Many companies couldn't operate without the government's financial support. They closed or operated on shorter hours, causing increased unemployment.
3. Many world-famous German dishes were created hundreds of years ago to prevent foods from spoiling. Sauerkraut, perhaps the best-known German food, was developed to preserve cabbage. To preserve meat, German cooks soaked it in vinegar and spices – and created sauerbraten.
4. In most German states, children attend elementary school for four years. Children may then go to one of several types of schools. A Gymnasium is a traditional junior and senior high school. This type of school prepares students for entrance into a university. There are also intermediate schools. They provide students with academic subjects as well as some job training. Other schools are Hauptschulen (vocational schools). These have fewer academic subjects than the other types of schools but offer much job training. Comprehensive schools combine all three types of junior and senior high levels of education.

ITALY

Capital: Rome

Area: 301,268 km²

Population: 57,187,000

Money: Euro

Italy is a country in southern Europe. It is known for its cultural heritage, which is rich and varied, and the natural beauty of its landscape. Its cities have spectacular churches and large central squares. Their museums contain some of the world's best-known art. The countryside has warm, sandy beaches; high, glacier-topped mountain peaks; and rolling hills covered with green fields and vineyards.

Italy occupies a boot-shaped peninsula that extends into the Mediterranean Sea from southern Europe. The country also includes two large islands, Sicily and Sardinia. Two independent states lie within Italy's borders: the tiny Republic of San Marino, and Vatican City, which is located completely within the city of Rome.

For hundreds of years, the history of Italy dominated the history of Western civilization. Ancient Rome began its overseas conquest during the 200's B.C., and by the A.D. 100's the Roman Empire controlled all the lands bordering the Mediterranean Sea. After the fall of Rome in the A.D. 400's, the Italian peninsula was divided among many different rulers. Much of the Italian peninsula was united during the early 1800's. Benito Mussolini, a Fascist, took control of the Italian government in the early 1920's. He was overthrown in 1943. In 1946, the people of Italy voted to abolish the monarchy. Italy has had a republican form of government since that time.

Since World War II, Italy has shifted from a predominantly agricultural economy to one based on modern industries. The transformation has been most complete in northern Italy, which is now one of the most advanced industrial areas of Western Europe. Southern Italy remains poorer and less industrialized, despite long term efforts of the Italian government to improve the region's industry and agriculture.

In 1957, Italy became one of the founding members of the European Community (EC). This union abolished tariffs on trade among its members. Membership of the EC has helped to strengthen Italy's economy through increased trade.

The Italian government owns a large portion of many companies, including banks, insurance companies, airlines, mining companies, and car manufacturers. Italy has few natural resources. Its most important resource is the rich farmland of the Po valley. Italy also has valuable forestland.

Service industries account for about two-thirds of Italy's GDP. Trade, including wholesalers and such retail establishments as shops and restaurants, ranks as Italy's most important type of service industry. Service industries are greatly aided by tourism. Many tourists, who visit Italy, contribute vast sums of money to the economy annually.

Italy engages in a great deal of international trade. The country's main exports include clothing and shoes, motor vehicles, machinery, chemicals, fruits and vegetables. Its principal imports are machinery, petroleum, textile yarns, metals, and food.

Comprehension

I. Say if the statements are true or false to the text:

1. Italian cities have spectacular churches and large central squares.

VI. Comment on the following:

1. Italy got its name from the ancient Romans. The Romans called the southern part of the peninsula Italia, meaning land of oxen or grazing land.
2. Clothing, including shoes, ranks as the leading type of manufactured product in Italy. The Italian fashion industry helps set clothing styles throughout the world.
3. Vatican City is the smallest independent country in the world. It serves as the spiritual and governmental centre of the Roman Catholic Church, though it covers only 109 acres in northwestern Rome. The pope, as absolute ruler of Vatican City, heads all government branches. But, since he devotes his time primarily to spiritual and ecclesiastical matters, he delegates most of his temporal authority to other officials. The Vatican maintains its own mail system, telephone and telegraph systems, water supply, and lighting and street-cleaning services. It also has its own bank, a large printing plant, and a rarely occupied jail.
4. Mafia is a type of secret criminal organization that developed in southern Italy and has gained great power in the United States. The term Mafia may have come from an Arabic word that means place of refuge. In Italy, it has two distinct but related meanings. As an adjective, it describes the confident style of behaviour that identifies a Mafioso. A Mafioso is a man who has great influence within his community. As a noun, mafia refers to a network of loosely connected groups called mafie, which hold power through violence, oppression and various criminal activities. The best-known Mafia is the one on the Italian island of Sicily.

TASK 1. COUNTRY QUIZ

Guess what country is described:

1. The cities of this country sprawl into surrounding suburbs but are smaller than most other European cities. They have fewer commercial buildings and lack the fast pace of life often found in cities of other industrial nations. Outdoor sports are an important part of people's life in this country. Skiing is a national sport, which started there thousands of years ago as a means of crossing the snow-covered land.
2. This country ranks as one of the world's leading producers of magnesite. The production of fine handicrafts forms an important part of the economy of this country. Manufacturers tend to stress high quality rather than mass production. As a neutral nation, the country serves as an important channel for the exchange of ideas between the countries of Western Europe and Eastern Europe. The capital of this country is the home of a number of UN agencies.
3. The greatest natural resource of this country is its widespread forests. But other resources are limited. Woodworking, pulp and paper production are chief manufacturing industries. This country also exports millions of farmed furs each year. The country has a rich folk culture, which is reflected in its crafts, music, and painting. The most famous feature of people's life is a special kind of bath called a sauna.
4. This country is a small kingdom that is almost surrounded by water. It is known for its beautifully designed manufactured goods, including furniture, porcelain and silverware. The country is one of the world's great shipping nations and fishing is one of the major industries of this country. The capital of the country is world famous for its Tivoli Gardens amusement park, which offers ballet and pantomime, rides and shooting galleries, etc.
5. According to one saying, people "created" this land by pumping out the water. Now it's a highly industrialized country. It is also one of the world's major cheese manufacturers. An important speciality of the agriculture of this country has long been a famous centre of diamond cutting and polishing. People are known for their good fellowship. People in farm areas and fishing villages sometimes wear wooden shoes.

6. The people of this country have developed highly prosperous industries based on their country's three main natural resources- timber, iron ore and water power. The standard of living is one of the highest in the world and people, who live there, spend more money per person on holidays than any other people in Europe. Now the economy of this country faces some problems because of the cost of financing welfare programmes. The government of the country doesn't permit advertising on radio or television.
7. The industries of this country specialize in skilled, precise work on small, valuable items. In watchmaking industry, for example, the cost of materials is only about one-twentieth the cost of labour. More than 95 per cent of the watches made in this country are exported. Banking ranks as one of the country's major industries. The banks are probably the safest in the world, partly because of the nation's neutrality. The country has a militia instead of regular armed forces.
8. This country is the fourth largest producer of cars in the world, after Japan, the USA and Germany. The country makes railway equipment and has the world's fastest trains. It is also known for its perfume industry. The capital of this country attracts artists and writers of all nationalities. Many great artists have produced their finest masterpieces there. The people of this country are famous for their enjoyment of life. Good food and good wine are an important part of everyday living for most people.
9. This country occupies a boot-shaped peninsula that extends into the Mediterranean Sea. It also includes 2 large islands. For many years the history of the country dominated the history of Western civilization. The southern part of the country is poorer and less industrialized than the northern one. The country's main exports include clothing and shoes, motor vehicles, machinery, chemicals, fruit and vegetables.
10. This is a large country in central Europe. From 1949 to 1990, it was divided into two parts. The people of this country are famous for being hard-working and disciplined. In 1945, the economy of the country lay almost in total ruin. But it recovered at an amazing rate in the 1950's and this recovery is often described as an "economic miracle". Manufacturing is the foundation of the country's economic strength. The country is the world's third largest manufacturer of automobiles.

SUPPLEMENTARY TEXTS

IKEA

IKEA is a well known Swedish company where almost every European person under 30 has purchased something from to decorate their flats. In only a few decades the company “went from the woods of southern Sweden to 31 countries around the world” and has become a large Multinational cooperation (MNC) with an interorganisational network. Higher tariffs, transport costs and the loss of economies of scale in domestic production further encourage production abroad.

The Swedish market is comparably small and IKEA had to expand in order to keep their steady growth rates. The success came as a surprise to many since the furniture business is originally a local business. IKEA is the only company in their field that has been able to expand so widely. The company seems to offer something that is unique to people and that appeals to them as something preferable. The background of the company seems to play a role in managing this uniqueness where Swedish influence on leadership, corporate culture and product offer leads towards the successful “IKEA spirit”.

While the internationalization of IKEA is one of the reasons for their great success, it seems that it is also the source of trouble. It seems that today’s “game of global strategy is increasingly a game of coordination”. The difficulty that IKEA faces is to keep their unique “IKEA spirit” and still be successful around the world.

Now let’s look at the sources for IKEAs success where special emphasis is given to the Swedish impact on leadership, corporate culture and product offer and the success they have with it. Internationalization puts challenges on the above success areas and those need to be evaluated, as well. IKEA sees their employees as an important asset. The founder of the company, Ingvar Kamprad once said: “For me the thing most essential at IKEA is the employee”. With this focus, the company has built a strong corporate culture. By definition this is a “pattern of shared values and beliefs that gives the members of an organization meaning and provides them with the rule for behaviour in the organization”. The corporate culture at IKEA reflects the characteristics of its Swedish background, and it is enforced throughout the world. Inside their company culture, employees generally enjoy to work for the company and give a good service through this.

Armani’s history

Giorgio Armani, born in 1934, Italian fashion designer whose clothes combine understated elegance, quality tailoring, and practicality. He was born in Piacenza, Italy. Armani dropped out of medical school and studied photography before becoming a window dresser at a department store in Milan. He worked there in menswear, then spent 10 years from 1961 to 1971 with Nino Cerutti, a leading men’s fashion house. After Armani left Cerutti, he founded his own firm with his clothes first appearing under the Armani label in 1975.

The Armani line was notable for informal, loosely-fashioned blazers and ruffled silhouettes. Although designed for men, the fashions were so popular with women that Armani began to design tailored clothing for them as well. He favored a neutral palette and soft, muted colors. In 1980 he introduced Armani U.S.A., featuring lower-priced, mass-produced copies of his custom-made clothes. That same year, he designed Richard Gere's wardrobe for the motion picture American Gigolo, as well as uniforms for the Italian air force. He also began to design his own fabrics. In 1982 he introduced his perfume, Armani. He was one of the few designers of men's clothes to win the Neiman-Marcus Award for Distinguished Service in the Field of Fashion (1981). Among the celebrities who began to wear his clothes were basketball coach Pat Riley and movie stars Glenn Close, Jodie Foster, and Michelle Pfeiffer.

Armani continued to expand his business throughout the 1980s, 1990s, and early 2000s, opening Emporio Armani ready-to-wear stores in many cities in Europe and North America. He brought out more fragrances; introduced Armani eyewear, hosiery, watches, golfing wear, and skiwear, and an Armani gift collection; and launched A/X Armani Exchange, a line of less-expensive casual clothing and stores to market them. With the launch of Armani Casa in 2000, he extended his imprint to home furnishings.

Armani's fashions were worn in such movies as The Untouchables (1987), Pulp Fiction (1994), Heat (1995), and Shaft (2000), and he designed the uniforms for the Italian World Cup soccer team in 1994. In 2000 the Guggenheim Museum in New York City mounted an exhibition of his fashions, citing him "for both radically changing the rules of fashion in our time and creating an iconic vision of modern dress."

Jean-Paul Gaultier

Jean-Paul Gaultier, born in 1952, French fashion designer, noted for audacious and humorous designs that defy traditional notions of style. Born in Paris, Gaultier sent sketches to several fashion houses at the age of 17 and was invited to work for French fashion designer Pierre Cardin for a year. He then designed for Jacques Esterel and Jean Patou before starting his own label in 1978.

Gaultier's collections wittily fuse Parisian glamour with flea-market kitsch and London street styles. His menswear has included suits with double-breasted jackets, highly exaggerated shoulders and wide lapels, and narrow-hipped, loose-legged trousers that taper slightly down to the ankle and break over the shoe. Jacket pockets are deliberately stitched down so as not to spoil the line of the suit. Many of his collections have had themes: James Bond (1979-1980), High-Tech (1980), Dada (1983). He has also challenged the accepted boundaries of gender, and in his first ready-to-wear menswear collection in 1984 showed a man's suit with a skirt made of wide-legged trousers that wrapped around each other to give the effect of a sarong. For women he introduced the corset as sportswear and created skirts with cutouts over the buttocks.

Gaultier designed costumes for the film The Fifth Element, and he created outfits for pop singer Madonna. In 2003 the French firm Hermes, a standard-bearer of good taste, announced that Gaultier would take charge of its women's ready-to-wear line.

Gustav Vigeland

Oslo is predominantly modern in design and architecture and is noted for its many museums, parks, and public statues. Some points of interest include the National Gallery; the Norwegian Folk Museum; the Kon-Tiki Museum, with exhibits relating to the voyages of the Norwegian anthropologist and explorer Thor Heyerdahl, the Vigeland Park.

Gustav Vigeland (1869–1943), Norwegian sculptor, studied in Oslo and Copenhagen, Denmark. He also studied with French sculptor Auguste René Rodin in Paris in 1892.

The Vigeland Park is one of Norway's most popular tourist attractions. Here are 212 sculptures in bronze, granite and iron, all by Gustav Vigeland. He also designed the entire park landscape. Most of the sculptures are placed on an 850 meter long axis and all the various stages in the life of man are depicted; from birth to death, one generation to the next, life's cycle. Many of the figures display an exuberant joy in life. The most popular figure is "Sinnataggen", an angry small boy.

In the centre of the park six giants hold aloft a large basin from which spills a veil of water. Vigeland's concept of life and the individual's place in life's community is represented in 20 groups of people and trees and 60 reliefs. The space around the fountain is laid in a stone mosaic pattern creating a labyrinth.

The Monolith Plateau is the highest point in the park. In the centre rises the Monolith, a 17 meter high granite column of 121 upward-striving figures of all ages; on the surrounding circular stairs are 36 groups in granite. The balustrade surrounding the plateau is broken by eight wrought-iron gates with figural patterns.

In Oslo you'll also find a unique sculpture museum, located in the previous studio and home of sculptor Gustav Vigeland. It was built in the 1920's by the municipality of Oslo as a studio, residence and future museum for Gustav Vigeland. In return the artist donated all his original works to the city. Here are almost all of Vigeland's works from his youth until his death: sculptures, drawings, woodcuts and woodcarvings. In accordance with his own wishes the urn containing his ashes rests in the museum tower.

BMW

Bayerische Motoren Werke AG (BMW), German manufacturer of automobiles, motorcycles, and aircraft engines. Based in Munich, Germany, the company is the leading auto exporter in Europe. The English translation of the company's name is Bavarian Motor Works.

The company traces its origins to 1913, when a Bavarian named Karl Rapp began an aircraft-engine shop in Munich named Rapp Motoren Werke. In 1917 Rapp resigned and the company, led by Austrian engineer Franz-Josef Popp, changed its name to Bayerische Motoren Werke. That same year chief engineer Max Friz designed the company's first aircraft engine, the six-cylinder Type IIIa, which created strong demand for BMW engines. When the 1919 Treaty of Versailles prohibited German companies from producing aircraft and aircraft engines, BMW switched to making air brakes for railway cars. In 1923 Friz developed the company's first motorcycle, the R32, a model that held world speed records for motorcycles during most of the 1930s.

In 1928 the company entered the automobile business by acquiring Fahrzeugwerke Eisenach (Eisenach Vehicle Factory), a maker of small cars based in Eisenach, Germany. In the 1930s BMW began producing a line of larger touring cars and sports cars.

After World War II ended in 1945, Allied forces dismantled the company's main factories. BMW made kitchen and garden equipment before introducing a new, inexpensive motorcycle to the German market in 1948. The company's return to auto production in the 1950s resulted in poor sales. In the 1960s the company turned its fortunes around by focusing on sports sedans and compact touring cars, and it began to compete with Mercedes-Benz in the luxury-car markets of Europe and the United States. BMW's U.S. sales peaked in 1986 but then dropped steeply, partly due to competition from two new luxury cars – Lexus, made by Toyota Motor Corporation, and Infiniti, made by Nissan Motor Co., Ltd. The 1989 collapse of the Berlin Wall led to a boom in car sales in Europe, and in 1992 BMW models outsold Mercedes-Benz models in Europe for the first time.

In 1990 BMW formed a joint venture with the British aerospace company Rolls-Royce PLC to produce aircraft engines for business jets. In 1992 BMW broke ground for a major automobile plant in Spartanburg, South Carolina, its first automobile plant in the United States.

In 1994 BMW acquired 80 percent of the Rover Group – a British manufacturer of small cars, luxury cars, and Land Rover sport-utility vehicles – from British Aerospace PLC. This proved unprofitable, however. In 2000 BMW sold its Rover car line to a small group of British investors and the Land Rover line of sport-utility vehicles (the only profitable portion of the Rover Group's holdings) to Ford Motor Company.

Carlsberg A/S

In 1847, J.C. Jacobsen, a young brewer from Copenhagen, established an industrial brewery on a hill at Valby, outside the city's old ramparts. The brewery was named Carlsberg (Carl's hill) after his son Carl and the hill on which the brewery was built.

As the first technically advanced Bavarian-style brewery in Denmark, Carlsberg became an unqualified success and quickly made an international name for its founder as a pioneer in brewing.

The son, Carl Jacobsen, followed in his father's footsteps. After a four-year trip around Europe, during which he learned how to run brewery, his career as a brewer began in 1871. Just 10 years later he founded his own brewery, New Carlsberg.

However, this division of production was not viable in the long term and in 1906 Old Carlsberg and New Carlsberg merged under the name of The Carlsberg Breweries.

In 1873, a group of industrialists and financiers founded the Tuborg Factories on a site north of Copenhagen which had been part of the Thuesborg estate in the 17th century.

With its own harbour, the operation initially comprised an export brewery, a glassworks and a sulphuric acid plant. In 1880 Tuborg focused on the production of beer and successfully launched the pilsner in Denmark.

In 1894, Tuborg merged with The United Breweries, a group of smaller Copenhagen breweries that had joined forces three years earlier. In 1903, United Breweries and Carlsberg signed an agreement to share all profits and losses. This agreement formed the basis for the final merger of Carlsberg and Tuborg in 1970. In 1987, this major Danish brewing group took the name Carlsberg A/S.

Carlsberg A/S is today a listed public limited company, focusing on the activities and values of Carlsberg Breweries A/S. Today, the Carlsberg group comprises about 100 subsidiaries and associated companies in Denmark and abroad.

J.C. Jacobsen formulated Carlsberg's goals in what has become known as "The Golden Words":

"In operating the Carlsberg Breweries it should be a constant purpose, regardless of profit, to develop the art of making beer to the greatest possible degree of perfection in order that these breweries as well as their products may forever stand out as a model and so, through their example, assist in keeping beer brewing in Denmark on a high and honourable level."

In 1976, the new Carlsberg Research Center was opened. It houses 60 laboratories with room for 150 employees who practice both applied and basic research using an innovative research concept that aims to develop new methods and projects which relate to raw materials, brewing processes and new products.
